Grazebrook

Grazebrook Early History and Arms

The information presented here, along with the various spellings of the name, have been taken from Dr. Joseph Jackson Howard: Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica, Volume III, Third Series, Mitchell and Hughes, London, 1900.

The surname of the Greysbrooke family is derived from a place near Rotherham, County Yorkshire. A suburb of Rotherham is known as “Greasborough” at the present time, and was a separate village within living memory. Roger de Gresbroke (in the time of Henry II, 1154-1189) is mentioned as holding the fee of Alice, Countess of Ewe, daughter of William de Albiney, Earl of Arundel, by Queen Adeliza, relict of Henry I. The ancient arms of Gresebrooke are described as: “Argent, three coneys feeding gules”; which means: “a silver or white shield with three red rabbits in a feeding position”.

Generation One

Bartholomew de Gresebroke
Died before 1268.

Bartholomew, a younger son, left the paternal estates in Yorkshire and settled at Shenston, County Staffordshire. He acquired from Robert de Grendon about 1204 and before 1214 the old manor house of the De Brays, afterwards called Gresbok Hall, and an estate in Shenston. A new manor house had been built about 1190-5. Shenston had been held by the De Brays since before 1127, and Bartholomew was infeuded subject to the same service to the chief lords, which explains the unusual tenure which was disclosed in January 1297 when the heriot was declared by which Gresebok Hall and the estates were held; viz. “a horse with saddle and bridle, aketon and lorica, and other arms appurtenant” on the death of each tenant. At this point in history, the aketon, (also acton, auqueton, hacketon, etc.) appears to have been a heavily padded garment worn under the lorica, which was leather or iron breastplate.

This unusual tenure suggests strongly that Bartholomew and his descendants were all or mostly knights. Some instances indicate that the possession of a certain income entailed the right, perhaps the necessity of knighthood; while others seem to restrict it entirely to those who personally went to war. Kings, great commanders and great clergy constantly created knights, and there are many cases of knights creating other knights, including their own sons and the sons of others.

Bartholomew also held lands at Ashfurlong, now in the parish of Sutton-Colefield, and is mentioned in documents circa 1214 - 1242.

Bartholomew de Gresebroke married Edith and they had the following children:

- Adam de Gresbroke, who succeeded his father in his estates, and was in possession in 1268. Adam d.s.p. (decessit sine prole, died without issue) before 1294 and was succeeded in the estates by his brother.
- Robert de Gresebroke, mentioned next.
Generation Two

Robert de Gresebroke
Died before 1305

Robert succeeded his brother Adam in the possession of the estates and is mentioned in documents circa 1274 – 1297. Robert de Gresbroke had a son:

- Robert de Gresebrooke, mentioned next.

Generation Three

Robert de Gresebrooke

Robert inherited Gresbrok Hall and the same estates and is mentioned in documents circa 1308 – 1322. Robert de Gresebrooke had a son:

- Robert de Gresbroke, mentioned next.

Generation Four

Robert de Gresbroke
Died in 1348

Robert was referred to as “miles” or “militibus” (a knight or soldier knight) when he appeared as a witness to a charter on February 12, 1345. Robert is mentioned in documents circa 1323 – 1348. Robert de Gresebrooke had two sons:

- William de Gresbroke, mentioned next.
- John de Gresbroke who witnessed three charters dated 1348.

Generation Five

William de Gresbroke

William inherited Gresbroke Hall and the same estates and purchased Swetewallemoor in Shenston in 1348. William de Gresbroke had two sons:

- John de Gresbroke, mentioned next.
- William de Gresbroke, who had letters of protection for a year, going to set out for foreign parts on November 15, 1340.

Generation Six

John de Gresbroke
Died circa 1383

John inherited the same estates and sold Swetewallemoor and is mentioned in documents circa 1370 – 1383. John de Gresbroke had a son:

- John de Gresbroke, mentioned next.
Generation Seven

John de Gresbroke
Died circa 1410

John inherited the same estates after April, 1383 and is mentioned in documents circa 1385 – 1407. John de Gresbroke had a son:

- John de Gresebroke, mentioned next.

Generation Eight

John de Gresebroke

John inherited the same estates after 1407 and before 1413 and is mentioned in documents circa 1407 – 1445. John de Gresebroke had a son:

- John Gresbrooke, mentioned next.

Generation Nine

John Gresbrooke de Shenston
Died before 1509

John inherited Gresbroke Hall and the same estates and is mentioned in documents circa 1473 – 1506. John Gresbrooke had two sons:

- John Greysbroke who succeeded to Gresbroke Hall and the Shenston estates, and was referred to as John Greysbroke Junior during his father’s lifetime and as John Greysbroke Senior after his father’s demise circa 1509.
- John Gresbrooke of Middleton, mentioned next. A younger brother with the same Christian name who was referred to as John Gresbrooke of Middleton. Two brothers with the same Christian name are of frequent occurrence for 300 years before this and perhaps 100 years after.

Generation Ten

John Gresbrooke of Stoke Hall in Middleton
Died in 1542

John succeeded to an estate and Stoke Hall in the parish of Middleton, Warwickshire; less than 6 miles from Gresbroke Hall and the Shenston estates in Staffordshire where his elder brother lived. Relative to John’s will, Dr. Jackson Howard states in his Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica (1900): “Proved at Lichfield 1542 ... This will mentions ‘that syde of the Crofte next the firthynge lane’ – an old cottage now stands about a field away from the junction of Farthing Lane with the name Stoke End. This was the site of Stoke Hall. At the bottom of a field falling away at the back lies a pond, now nearly dried up, but still known by the name of ‘the great lake’”

John Gresbrooke married Isabell who died in 1554 and they had the following children:

- John Gresbrooke, eldest son. Apparently, there was some discord in the family. John’s father had stipulated in his will “... my sone Alverey shall have yt and no other man.” In her will, John’s mother Isabell named her son John and her son Alverey “desyryng hym to be good to his brethern and systrs”. However, her husband did not name John; and after court proceedings, Dr. Jackson Howard states in his Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica (1900): “Alverey therefore turned him out with violence.”

- Alverey or Alured Greysbrooke, mentioned next.

- Robert Greysbrooke who married Emmes or Emmot. Robert died in January 1588/9 and Emmes died in December 1605. They had two sons, Robert and Hugh. Robert, the eldest son, eventually succeeded to the Middleton estates as heir to his uncle Alverey and Hugh succeeded to his father’s property in Hints.

- Henry Gresebrooke who married Elizabeth. Henry died in April 1557. They had two sons, Richard Greisbrooke and Nicholas Greisbrooke.

- Hugh Gresbrooke

- Margaret Gresbrooke who married Mr. Shurrocke

- Elizabeth Gresbrooke who married Mr. Hylley

Generation Eleven

Alverey Greysbrooke

Died in 1575 or 1576.

Alverey, also known as Alured, inherited the whole of Middleton estates and Stoke Hall. Alverey is mentioned in documents circa 1540 – 1575. His will is dated September 24, 1575, was proved at Lichfield March 7, 1576 and the inventory was dated January 4, 1575/6.

Alvery married Margaret Keene, daughter of Thomas Keene of Sutton Coldfield, Warwickshire. Margaret’s mother was Margaret Gibbons, eldest daughter of William Gibbons of Little Sutton and his wife Agnes Harman; who was in turn a younger daughter of William Harman (d. 1470) of Moor Hall and Joan Squire (d. 1523), a daughter of Henry Squire. Agnes Harman was the sister of John Harman alias Vesey, Bishop of Exeter from 1519 to 1554.

Alverey Greysbrooke and Margaret Keene had the following children:

- Margaret Greysbrooke who married before September 1575 to Henry Sewall, Mayor of Coventry in 1578 and 1606 (see Sewall and Sewell, Generation Two) Henry Sewall’s will is dated September 1, 1624, and he died April 6, 1628 at 84, therefore he was born in 1544. Margaret’s will is dated May 7, 1628 and was proved November 23, 1629, and both lie buried in the Drapers’ Chapel in St. Michael’s, Coventry.

- Anne Greysbrooke who married after 1575 to Thomas Roper. The ancient coat of arms of Gresbroke, Argent, three conays feeding gules, were allowed for in the Visitation of Co. Derby in 1634 and 1662 as a quartering to the Roper arms.

- Prudence Greysbrooke

- Mary Greysbrook
