

Catherine Clark Sewell, her husband Ernest and their five children are shown on page 16 and again in greater detail on page 18.

This booklet appears to have been last updated in 1985 and was copied in 2006 by Robert Sewell who has, as far as we have been able to determine, no relationship to Catherine Clark Sewell or any of the persons in this booklet.

Historiography on the Sewell Coat of Arms.

The Sewell Coat of Arms illustrated on the cover was drawn by an hercient heraldic archives. Documentation for the Sewell Coat of Arms design can be found in Burke's General Armory. Heraldic artists of old develop their own unique language to describe an individual Coat of Arms. In their language, the Arms (shield) is as follows:

"La a chev between three bees volant ar". Above the shield and helmet is the Crest which is described as:

" A dexter arm endowed in armor." When translated the blagon also describes the original color of the Sewell Arms and Crest as it appeared centuries ago.

Family mottos are belieyed to have originated as battle cries in Medieval times. A Motto was not recorded with this Sewell Coat of Arms.

Individual surnames originated for the purpose of more specific identification. The four primary sources for second names occupation, location, father's name or personal characteristics. The surname Sewell appears to be locational in origin, and is believed to be associated with the meaning, "one who came from Sewell (Seven Wells)." Different spellings of the same original surname are a common occurence. Dictionaries of surnames indicate probable spelling variations of Sewell to be Sewall. Although bearer's of the old and distinguished Sewell name comprise a small fraction of the popu'ation there are a number who have established for it a significant place in history. They include: Samuel Sewell (Sewall) (1652-1730). A Judge who became chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts in 1718. He is said to be eminent for wisdom and learning. Stephen Sewell (Sewall) (1702-1760) American Judge who was Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Maasachusetts in 1752. Mary Sewell (1797-1884) English author who attained an extraordinary popularity with her children's books and poems. Over one million copies of her ballad "Mother's Last Words" was sold in 1860. William Sewell (1804-1874) English Divine who became a Perpetual Curate of St. Nicholas in Carisbrooke Castle. His reputation rests chiefly on his work as a tutor at the Exeter College.

Until about 1100 A.D. most people in Europe had only one name. (This is still true in some primitive countries today). As the population increased it became awkward to live in a village wherein perhaps 1/3 of the males were named John, another sizeable percentage named William, and so on.

And so, to distinguish one John from another a second name was needed. There were four primary sources for these second names. They were : a man's occupation, his location, his father's name or some peculiar characteristic of his. Here are some examples: Occupation: The local house builder, food preparer, grain grinder and suit maker would be named respectively: John Carpenter, John Cook, John Miller, and John Taylor. Location: The John who lived over the hill became known as John Overhill, the one who dwelled near a stream might be called John Brook or perhaps John Atbrook. Characteristics: An unusually small person might be named Short, Small, Little or Lytle. A large man might be named Large, Long, Lang or Longfellow. Many persons having characteristics of a certain animal would be given the animal name. Examples: A sly person might be named Fox, a filthy person-Hogg, a good swimmer- Fish etc.

In addition to needing an extra name for identification, one occupational group found it necessary to go a step further. The fighting man: The fighting man of the middle ages wore a metal suit of armor for protection. Since this suit of armor included a helmet that completely covered the head, a knight in full battle dress was unrecognizable. To prevent friend attacking friend during the heat of battle it became necessary for each knight to somehow identify himself. Many knights accomplished this by painting colorful patterns on their battle shields. These patterns were also woven into cloth surcoats which were worn over a suit of armor, thus born the term "Coat of Arms".

As this practise grew more popular it became more and more likely that two knights unknown to each other might be using the same insignia. To prevent this records were kept that granted the right to a particular pattern to a particular knight. His family also shared his right to display these arms. In some instances, these records have been preserved and/or compiled into book form. The records list the family name and an exact description of the Coat of Arms granted to that family. In our day and age, a Coat of Arms is one of the rare devices remaining that can provide an incentive to preserve our heritage.

The Sewell Descendants.

These are the descendants of the Sewell families put in story form of a very special group of people beginning in the early 1600's believed perhaps to come over on the Mayflower. In 1620 from Southampton, England to Plymouth, Mass. The Pilgrims who stablished the first permanent Colony in New England. "The Mayflower Compact", lists the name of George Soule as one of its passengers. Down through the years the Sewell name was sometimes spelled Soule.

The first known Sewell on record was at Beverly, Mass. Ernest and I have been at the City Hall in Beverly, Mass and looked up records on his descendants.

Family of Dominicus Sewell

The First Generation of the Sewell Family Dominicus Sewell's name has been found on the Church Records stating he was married to Sarah Thorndike. She was born January 18, 1736, Beverly, Mass. Her mother was Abigail Sollows and her father was Herbert Thorndike. Dominicus and Sarah had four children born in Beverly, Mass as follows:

2nd generation. William Louden Sewell was the first son. He was baptised October 8, 1758 at Beverly, Essex County, Mass.

Thus ends the era of William Sewell.

The Fourth Generation of the Sewells.

George Sewell was a son of William Sewell. He was born in 1822 and died in 1911. He had seven children as follows:

5th generation. Thomas Odber Sewell was born in 1853. He was never married. He was killed in the woods at the age of nineteen.

5th generation. Colby Allen Sewell was born in 1857. He went by the name of Cole. He moved to Caribou, Me. He married a McDonald girl. He died in Caribou in 1930, at the age of 87.

5th generation. James Sewell was born in 1859. He was married to Angeline Cook. They were just married a year and he died at the age of 21.

5th generation. Caroline Sewell was born in 1861. She married Thomas Clark. Thomas Clark was my Great Uncle.

5th generation. J. Herbert Sewell was born in 1865. He was my husband's father. His mother died when he was two years old and he lived with his cousins and Aunts until his father married again. When he was twelve years old he came to Fraser Richardson's and did chores while Fraser worked in the woods. He twitched logs to the river when the stream drive was on. He did this until he was about fourteen. He took Fraser's team to haul rocks to put in abutments at Acker Creek, Lower Brighton, N.B. That winter he went to the woods at the age of fifteen. He worked most of his early years in the woods, up until he was married.

He took up a grant of land at Howard Brook from the Government. In order to receive this land he was to clear five acres of ground.

He built himself a log house. He and his wife Sarah lived in this house for two years.

He bought a farm in Carlisle, N.B. and farmed in the summer time and in the winter he lumbered for F.E. Sayre for the next few years.

His wife Sarah and an immigrant lad, Sam Allan, did the chores in the winter time.

Sam and his sister came over to this country on a boat from England and landed in Halifax. They got separated. He never knew where his sister was until he was fifty years old. He found her in Boston, Mass. Sam worked on the railroad after he grew up and lived in Hartland, N.B.

When J. Herbert Sewell lumbered for F.F. Sayre, he cut logs and hauled them to the Guimac Stream all Winter.

During the spring of the year and during the spring drive he had a section of the Guimac Stream to keep the logs moving in after the drive went by his section, he went back to farming and farmed all summer.

He and his wife, Sarah, had three children. Sarah took sick with Tuberculosis and died in 1900.

In 1903, he married Sarah's sister, Emma Johnson. This is Ernest's mother. He farmed and worked at lumbering until 1911. Here in Carlisle, N.B., they had five children. He moved to Rosedale, N.B. in 1911. They had one child born in Rosedale, N.B.

He bought two farms in Rosedale, N.B.; one was the old homestead and the other one across the road.

He grew potatoes and kept cattle and farmed with horses until 1924.

The winter of 1925, he went to County Line in the Gibson Branch and cut logs for F.E. Sayre.

In the spring of 1926, he moved back from County Line to Nine Mile Brook and cut logs all summer with two pair of horses.

Ernest was fifteen that spring. He went down with his Dad and kept the books. He also hauled provisions three miles back to the camp, including hay and grain for the horses.

He used a horse and a bark sled to haul these provisions with. He would haul as much as a half a ton of hay and thirty bushels of oats at one time.

These provisions came down from Hartland in a box car to County Line Station, on the Gibson Branch.

Ernest hauled these provisions and stored them at the County Line camps. He had to haul them back to Nine Mile Brook when they were needed.

He was also a spare man for a day if some one took sick. Ernest and Garfield Turner sawed 135 logs one hot day. (They did not have any power saws in those days). In October, he put in two more pair of horses of his own from the farm and yarded logs until Christmas.

In January, 1927 they hired six more pair of horses and hauled the logs to County Line Mill.

Family of Dominicus Sewell

In 1928, he bought another farm from Alec White in Rosedale, N.B., he and Walter Sewell his son, farmed together until he died in May 1932. Sarah and Emma (Johnson) Sewell's father and mother came over from Ireland in 1863.

5th generation. Bertha Sewell was born in 1867. She married Edward Richardson. They had one child.

6th generation. Edna Richardson. Her mother died young and Edna went to live with her Uncle J. Herbert Sewell until she was married to Thomas Stockford. Edna (Richardson) Stockford was Haley Stockford's mother.

5th generation. Jim Sewell was a half brother to this Sewell family. His father George Sewell was married the second time to a Campbell girl. Jim Sewell had five children. Thus ends this era of the Sewell Family.
